Weekly Update: Next Partitions

November 9, 2026 · Week of November 2

All the new website content is now handed to Marc as one update, ready for him to review and publish. Your expert answers are woven into the six blog posts, your Google Business Profile is filled in, and Bing and Apple Maps are under way. Nothing is on nextpartitions.com yet: it goes live as soon as Marc publishes the update.

What we did this week

1. Your expertise, in the blog posts. We turned your written answers and voice note into short "expert advice" cards in the six blog posts, each with our question above your answer. This is the part other sites can't copy.

Your answer on the mounting styles post.

2. All the new website content is handed to Marc: 28 pages and 6 blog posts, with their drawings, 3D views and images, in one update in Marc's code, waiting for him to review and publish. The blog posts go in as drafts, so none appears until it's switched on.
3. All 96 standard stall kits can be bought online. Anything else (other sizes, more than 6 stalls) goes to a quote request.
4. We shortened the long sections at the bottom of the material pages by about 15%, so they read faster.
5. The installer directory, refined.
   - Dallas and Fort Worth are now two separate areas instead of one "DFW" page. Google search data showed people search far more for each city by name than for "DFW" or "Dallas Fort Worth".
   - Each city page names the city in its opening lines, with varied wording, so the 99 city pages don't all read the same.

- The top of each city page now shows the key facts and the "Configure your partitions" button next to a map of the area covered.
- The pages say clearly that you ship partitions nationwide; installers are listed city by city.

The top of the Dallas installer page on the test site (sample installers).

The directory is ready. We're holding it until the content update is live, so Marc reviews one change at a time.

6. Local installer rules. The six cities we couldn't confirm online (Long Island, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Omaha, Raleigh and Worcester) now have a call sheet with the right office and phone number. We'll make the calls.
7. Google Business Profile: filled in. Your profile is verified. We added the description, a second category ("Bathroom supply store"), seven services, the first post with a link to the quote page, and your logo. Your address stays hidden, with the whole United States as the service area.
   - We prepared a cover image and checked it detail by detail: headrail, floor shoes, door heights, and an accessible stall with the right width, door and pull handle. It stands in until we have photos of your real jobs.
   - Your review link, to send to customers: g.page/r/CfoQWj2adEGiEBM/review

The cover image for your Google profile.

8. Bing and Apple Maps.
   - Bing Places: your listing is copied over from your Google profile and goes live within 7 to 12 days.
   - Apple Maps (Apple Business Connect): the account is being set up now.

Open the content preview (all pages and blog posts, with your answers)

What we need from you

1. A heads-up for your team. Apple may call (833) 997-7489 with a verification code in the next few days. Please ask whoever answers to pass the code to us.
2. Your quote promise. The site says both "2 business hours" and "2 business days". Which one do you want to commit to? We'll use it on the site and on your Google profile.
3. Five to ten photos of finished jobs you have the rights to use. Real photos build the most trust on Google, and one becomes the profile's cover.
4. A list of past customers (name, email, what they bought, roughly when), so we can send them the review link. Recent, happy customers first.
5. Opening date and closures: the month and year you started, and the days you'll be closed in the next 12 months, so Google never shows you as open when nobody answers.
6. Any Facebook or LinkedIn pages you already have. If there are none, we'll create both.
7. Authorized brands, in writing: which brands you may call yourself an "authorized distributor" for. Until then, we don't use that wording anywhere.
8. Price ranges for the cost guide, still open from last week, once your price research is done.

Coming next

1. The content goes live: Marc reviews and publishes the update, then we switch on the blog posts.
2. More listings: Apple Maps verification, then Yelp, the BBB, LinkedIn and Facebook, all with the same name and phone.
3. Reviews: review requests to past customers, as soon as we have the list.
4. A pilot video, "The 4 mounting styles explained", built from our drawings, for YouTube and the mounting styles guide.
5. The installer directory goes to Marc once the content is live.

Installers, prices and reviews in the prototype and on the test database are made up. The cover image is computer-generated and will be replaced by a photo of a real job.