RANK FRIENDLY

Weekly Update: Next Partitions

October 19, 2026 · First report

This is our first report, so it covers everything built so far, not just this week. From here on you'll get a short update like this every Monday.

What we've built so far

1. Homepage ideas for Marc — Suggestions for how the homepage could lead visitors in three ways: price it yourself (the configurator), send your plans, or shop the catalogue. Marc designs the site, so these are ideas for him to use as he sees fit.
   Homepage ideas
2. Example installer pages — Sample pages to show how the installer directory works, using Dallas–Fort Worth as the example area: a state page, an area page with a map of who covers where, and a profile page for each installer. The real first area will be chosen from where your orders come from. These pages sit apart from your main site: the homepage and the menu never link to them, so shoppers stay on the configurator and the catalogue.
   Example state page · Example area page · Example profile
3. A quick pricer on the installer pages — Built on the configurator Marc made, with the same questions, shown one at a time on the example area page. What we added: an installation estimate next to the partitions price, the price shown only after the visitor gives an email (so every price check becomes a lead), and a drawings upload.
   Try it
4. An installation step for Marc's configurator, for later — Designed, not switched on. Marc's configurator stays as it is until installers are approved and working well. It would then appear only where approved installers cover the job, with a price range; if it isn't worth it, we leave it out.
   Installation step
5. The full job, from quote to installed restroom — The customer's quote page (approve drawings, choose an installer, pay by card, bank transfer or purchase order). The installer's portal (price the job from their agreed rates, ask questions through you, set the date, mark it installed). Your view of every job, including what happens when nobody prices. And the review form.
   Customer's quote · Installer portal · Your view · Review form
6. Getting installers listed — An application page for installers, and our checklist for approving them: insurance, city or business registration, references we call, a timed test job and the signed listing agreement.
   Apply page · Approval checklist
7. Every email written — Ten emails: the price range, job requests and reminders to installers, "your options are ready", "you've been chosen", "the job is yours", the review request, and three for when no installer has priced yet.
   All emails

8. The system behind it, built and tested — Customer details stay hidden from installers until the customer has chosen them and paid (or the school's purchase order is accepted). Up to three suitable installers are invited to price each job with a deadline; if nobody prices, the search widens once and your team is alerted. Prices well above an installer's agreed rates are flagged, and phone numbers and emails are blocked from messages until the job is released. Ready for Marc to connect to the site.
9. Plans and research — Your February SEO strategy checked against the live site, 147 installer search terms mapped to pages, a guide to installer licensing by state and city (Texas, Dallas, Miami-Dade), the onboarding roadmap, and our proposal for how jobs are shared between installers.

All installers, prices and reviews in the samples are made up. Nothing is live on your site yet; these are working previews.

What we need from you

- Your OK on how installation is priced — Each installer agrees their own rates with us up front (a price per stall, plus extras like removing old stalls), which gives your customer an instant price range. Then up to three installers send a firm price for the actual job, and the customer chooses one. We add nothing to the installer's price; you earn on the partitions. We can go through it on a short call.
- Your office address and signage — Can you confirm the office has Next Partitions signage? Then we can start the first layer of trust listings: Google Business Profile, Apple Maps, the main business directories and your social profiles.
- Your CRM, if you use one — And how many people would use it. If you don't, we recommend HubSpot.

Coming next

- Fixing thin pages — Building out pages on the site that have too little content to rank.
- Recruiting the first installers — In the first area we choose together, inviting installers to apply and vetting them; the directory launches there once three are approved.
- Finishing the system — Saving leads from the price step, change orders, installer applications and reviews.
- Building it into your site — Together with Marc, starting with the first area.
- Nationwide rollout — Once the system works end to end in the first area, we roll it out area by area across the country.